CITY TRUSTEES

The Usually Quiet Session—Bond Bid Accepted

All members present. The regular order of business was suspended and the matter of bids for the $18,000 bond issue was taken up. The city attorney reported having communicated with the state board of examiners in regard to their bid and was not yet able to say what the expense of delivering boards to Sacramento would be. This report was filed.

On motion of Trustee Coker the city attorney was instructed to draft a resolution awarding the library site and city hall bonds to Purcell Gray & Gale, Inc., and rejecting other bids (This firm gives $525 premium). A large list of demands were received and another lot approved.

The city attorney reported that the Consolidated Water Co. agrees to maintain an office in Glendale for the collection of rates and receiving orders for connections. The city attorney was instructed to make a formal demand on the city treasurer for a final settlement of accounts. A motion passed that when adjournment was made it be to Thursday evening, May 25th.

A communication was received from C. H. Allan for permission to place advertising seats on certain streets the same was granted subject to the pleasure of the board.

A communication was received from Charles Grosman, complaining of poor water service on Ninth street, and was referred to the city attorney. Mr. E. C. Franck addressed the board concerning the condition of Eagle Rock road near Fourth street. The matter was referred to the board of public works. Mr. Bunn addressed the board complaining of the water supply on Doran street. The city attorney was instructed to communicate with the Consolidated Water Co. in regard to this and the Grosman complaint.

The Problem of the Schools

The problem of schools, how to keep them up to date and provide opportunities for all of our children to acquire an education, is one of the most serious that we have to wrestle with in a growing community, and in no place is it much more serious than in Glendale. Superintendent Keppel, referring to this matter recently, said: "Why, you have only just begun to build schools in Glendale"; and such seems to be the case. The trustees have called a town meeting to find out what the people want, for the necessities of the case seem to demand action. The Sixth street school started two years ago with three teachers; this year there are five employed, and in the opinion of the trustees there will be eight required next year. In this school the various grades have pupils in number as follows: First, 38; second, 22; third, 40; fourth, 49; fifth and sixth, 46; seventh and eighth, 38. The smallest number in any one grade next year promises to be thirty.

In the Fourth Street school they are as follows: First grade, 38; second, 25; third, 35; fourth, 36; fifth, 24; sixth, 23; seventh, 33; eighth, 22. Past records show that the annual increase is 15 per cent in number of pupils, and, figuring on that basis, the trustees conclude that next year there will be eight teachers required in each school, in addition to a special teacher of music, sloyd and drawing, with one assistant, making a total of eighteen teachers. There are but five rooms in the Sixth Street school, so it becomes apparent that more room will have to be provided, and it will be a question whether to rent quarters or build. This matter will probably be decided by the meeting of citizens The salaries now being paid are $80, $85 and $90 a month to the teachers, with $125 and $130 respectively to the principals.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL.

The Ladies' Aid of the Casa Verdugo M. E. Church will give an ice cream social at the church, on Park avenue, just west of Central, this (Friday) evening. Everybody turn out and boost a good cause.

GLENDALE HONORED BY A CLUBWOMAN.

In response to many inquiries concerning the meaning of the design of the California State Federation pin for Women's Clubs, Mrs. Mary H. Gridley searched the records for an answer, the state board had no explanation of the emblem. Mrs. Gridley wrote the following concept of the design which was accepted by the state officials as well as by the congress at Long Beach and will be published in the Year Book.

The State Federation Wings are spread to take a higher flight into the atmosphere of progress, and a more thorough knowledge of all that tends to the development of the noblest faculties, the most angelic sympathies and the social betterment of mankind.

The Torch lights the way into the field of national harmony for progressive students who have an ever-increasing desire to acquire a knowledge of the beautiful and the good.

The Circle suggests unity and harmony without end and manifests our motto, "Strength united is Stronger."

The sale of California State Federation pins, the badge of membership, at the convention, at Long Beach, was a recordbreaker in numbers. Mrs. Mary H. Gridley turned into the treasury the sum of $67.50, which she received for federation pins sold by her during Friday and Saturday of the meetings. This is the largest number of pins sold at any convention of the state federation since its organization, ten years ago.

On Wednesday, May 17th, Mrs. Russell Waters, California state president of Federated Clubs gave a grand party to all the state officers who were at the convention from the North and South. She first took them to Covina where the party were met by the club ladies of Covina and their husbands in automobiles, the autos were filled with flowers, the party of twenty-seven ladies with Mrs. Waters entered the motor cars and were taken through the San Gabriel Valley to the home of Judge Silent where a luncheon was served to them and they were then taken over the estate which was beautiful beyond description, with flowers and fruits. It was a veritable paradise. Re-entering the autos the party were taken to Mr. Russell Waters' estate which he is developing near Covina in the mountains. The buildings are of concrete, an observatory on top of the mountain permitted a magnificent view of the surrounding country. Again the happy party were taken a ride to the home of Mrs. Whitcomb where the Glendora club women served a chicken dinner to the entire crowd in the yard, at every place huge baskets of roses and oranges were presented to the guests. It was almost a royal pageant from the hour of arrival at Glendora until the party left for Los Angeles late in the afternoon. Mrs. Mary H. Gridley, president of the Glendale Tuesday Afternoon Club, was one of the guests as she had been reappointed a member of the State Board of Federated Clubs at the last meeting at Long Beach.

GRADUATION EXERCISES.

On Monday evening the Eighth grade graduating class of the Seventh Day Advents church school held its commencement exercises in the Sanatarium gymnasium. The hall was artistically decorated with the colors of the class, pink and green, an especially pretty feature was the class motto "Excelsior," formed by pink roses, in a bank of greenery over the platform. The following very interesting program was rendered by various members of the class and school: "Will There be Any Stars in My Crown?" school; invocation, Elder C. F. Marvin; address, Ellsworth Andross; "Welcome Sweet Springtime," school; "The Bluejays' Way," Viola Wells; "Summer," Vera Barnett; piano—"The Mill," Glenn Wessels; "Real Power," Elliott Colby; "What's in My Pottet?" Richard Ball; "Daffodils," Mary Trautwein; song, "Rosebuds," Primary Girls; "Press On," Ruth Sutton; piano, "Fifth Nocturne," Ethel Mondon; "Baby's Clock," Jeanie Wessels; piano, "Les Sylphes," Ethel Mondon and Mary Trautwein; "Between Two Angels," Hattie Mallernee; "The Four Leaf Clover," Eighth Grade Girls; "Under the Leaves," Elizabeth Ball; "He's My Friend," Edna Jones; "The Playhouse," Mary Colby; march, from "Tannhauser," Irma Young; "Discontent," Cora Jones; "Clouds," Winea Simpson; "Jolly Bluebirds," Primary.

At its conclusion diplomas were presented by the class teacher, Miss Crystal Eggers, to Miss Vera Barnett, Miss Ruth Sutton, Miss Ethel Mondon, Miss Hattie Mallunce, Miss Edna Jones, Miss Irma Young, Mr. Elliot Colby, Mr. Ellsworth Andross, Mr. Walter Trautwein, and Mr. Glenn Wessels.

CALLED BY DEATH.

Clara Loretta Bradwick Farrar, wife of H. B. Farrar, mother of Russell aged 18, Clifford aged 13, and Carroll aged 9, unexpectedly passed away at the family home in Glendale at 7:15 p. m., May 16, from heart trouble, aged nearly forty-eight years. She was born in Morgan county, Ohio, June 20, 1863, and married to H. B. Farrar June 15, 1887. Following her marriage the family moved to Minneapolis, Minn., and four years later they moved to Quincy, Ill. In August, 1904, they moved to Los Angeles and located in Highland Park. Mrs. Farrar was one of the charter members of the Highland Park Christian church and was a faithful worker in all branches of its work, until in October, 1910, the family moved to Glendale where she identified herself with the Central Christian church; she was a constant worker in the church for thirty-two years and was loved by all who knew her. She leaves a wide circle of friends, who mourn with the family in their sudden bereavement.

The funeral service was held at 1 p. m., May 19, at the Central Christian church of Glendale, the interment was at Forest Lawn Cemetery at 3:30.—Highland Park Herald.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Regular meeting was held Tuesday evening in I. O. O. F. hall. The chamber has various matters under consideration which will be of advantage to the community when carried to a conclusion. Much interest was manifested in the banquet proposed to be held by the Chamber in the near future. Five new members were received, bringing the membership up to seventy-one.

TAKEN IN THE ACT

Marshal Miller Arrests Vender of Strong Drink—Pleads Guilty and Enriches the Treasury

For several months past Marshal Miller has been on the lookout for a peddler of beer and things stronger in the way of liquid refreshments, whom he had reason to suppose was doing business unlawfully in the city, but found difficult to catch in the act. Tuesday afternoon Mr. Miller found the peddler and his loaded wagon in front of the blacksmith shop on Third street and being personally unknown to him was able to induce the man to sell a case of the best to be delivered at his (the marshall's) residence near by. The peddler unsuspiciously drove around to the Howard street residence of the marshal and delivered the beer, taking payment and giving a receipt. Thus legally fortified for action, Mr. Miller placed the man under arrest. The city recorder, tired out by a tedious record of "Nothing doing," had closed his office and retired to his home on Ninth street (where the truffles and loquats grow) [illegible] him and a few minutes later the marshal driving the fire horse and general utility wagon, called for him, having left his prisoner meanwhile in the charge of the building inspector and Trustee Watson. Arriving at his office, Judge Whomes lost no time in preliminaries, but calling himself to order, at once notified the prisoner of his rights and read to him the ordinance covering the case. The prisoner very sensibly concluded early in the proceedings that his case was a weak one, and waiving time for sentence, plead guilty. The law imposes a maximum penalty of $300 and imprisonment for 90 days. The judge considered that the sum of $150 was sufficient penalty to impose under the circumstances and sentenced the prisoner, who gave the remarkably prohibitionary name of B. F. Clearwater, to pay that sum or go to jail for ninety days. Marshal Miller accompanied him to Los Angeles and little time was lost in enriching the city treasury in the amount named.

Clearwater seems to have been the representative of a Los Angeles liquor dealer named Fentich and has evidently been doing a flourishing business here.

CLOSING EXERCISES.

The closing exercises of the Glendale Seventh Day Adventist church school were held in the Sanitarium gymnasium Monday evening, May 22. A very pleasing and profitable program was given, all the students assisting with music or recitation.

The rendering of their parts by the primary pupils was especially appreciated by the audience. A class of ten graduated from the eighth grade receiving their diplomas at the close of the entertainment. The class colors were pink and green and their motto "Excelsior." It is apparent that Miss Eggers, their teacher, has been very efficient and faithful in her work and especially so, having had to carry eight complete grades through the whole year. The floral decorations were beautiful and a profusion of bouquets given each graduate. At the close Elder Ford of Los Angeles spoke of the object of the church school in the Adventist denomination and received the donations amounting to some $100, whihc is to be used in adding another room to the present school building, so that two teachers can be employed next year.

GLENDALE TRAVELERS HEARD FROM.

Letters from Mrs. E. G. Pack and Miss Minnie Penn, who recently left Glendale for England have been received by friends here. They sailed from Portland, Maine, on the Megantic and arrived in Liverpool May 6th. Their eight-day voyage was over smooth water and under a blue sky, said to have been the best voyage of the year. Mrs. Pack's health, her many friends will be glad to know, was none the worse for the trip although she confesses to not having been a "good sailor." Miss Penn at last accounts was at Hastings and it is probable that Mr. and Mrs. Pack will locate for the present in the same neighborhood.

WORTH WHILE CLUB.

The Worth While Club met Friday evening, May 19, with Miss Lois Hatch on Central avenue. After roll call and a short business session, the club enjoyed a short program on Emerson with Miss Oesterhaus as leader. The program follows: Biography, Miriam Harrison; "Emerson as a Poet," Ethel Porter; selections from his poems, Lauriel Randall; "Style of His Essays," Sina Bailey.

After the program a pleasant surprise was given Miss Belle Lyans in the form of a shower of flowers and gifts. The surprise was in honor of her going away for a short vacation and visit to her former home in Plainview, Texas.

Miss Randall was elected secretary to fill the vacancy made by Miss Lyans' resignation. Dainty refreshments were then served, after which the club adjourned wishing Miss Lyans a safe journey and a very pleasant visit.

The next meeting of the club will be June 12th, at the home of Miss Belle McKee, 805 West Fifth street. This is the regular meeting for Bible study and the leader will be Miss Hatch.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

Delegates to state convention, May 23-27, at Long Beach, were appointed at the [illegible] meeting Friday, May 19, as follows: Mrs. Jane Dawson, Mrs. Kate Evans, Mrs. M. Overton, Mrs. Della Dick, Mrs. D. F. Fitch, Mrs. Gaylord attending as state superintendent. Others attending are Mrs. L. E. Brown, Mrs. M. A. Harn, Mrs. Burns. The Franchise Banquet announced for June 1st will not be held until June 6, 6:30 p. m., at I. O. O. F. hall. Toasts and speeches will be the bright after dinner time for those attending. Program in next week's paper.

Some misunderstanding regarding the drinking fountain erected at Glendale and Fourth streets and presented by the W. C. T. U., seems to be floating in the air, and requests have been made that we make this plain that the $166.75 we put in this fountain was raised in two years by our organization, and no help from any other society, by suppers, lectures, "Cinderella in Flower Land," and donations, and publicly given to city September 25, 1910.

BROWNSBERGER TYPEWRITING CONTEST.

The Brownsberger typewriting contest, of which notice has been given before in these columns, took place on Friday the 19th inst., and the occasion was doubly appreciated by all those present in view of a pleasing song program in connection therewith.

Mr. Pease of the Remington Typewriting Company, was present and after opening remarks by Dr. Jos. W. H. Camp, manager. Mr. Pease addressed the school along the lines of its past history and present prosperous condition. Three solid-gold medals were awarded to the winners whose names are as follows: Miss Mary Bauer, first prize; Miss Louise Turner, second prize; and Miss Eleanore Zuber, third prize. Mrs. Charles Benson, principal of the typewriting and shorthand department, was mistress of ceremonies, and Professor Charles Benson was timekeeper.

Another contest between the operators of the Royal and Underwood machines used at the Brownsberger Business College will be held five weeks from the above date.

BASE BALL.

A new baseball team has been organized in Glendale and will play its first match game at Verdugo Park next Saturday afternoon, when they will meet the Santa Fe team. These games will be a regular Saturday afternoon feature at the Park.

THE CHURCHES

CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Services as usual. Preaching by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Utter, at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Everybody cordially invited.

ST. MARKS CHURCH.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Next Sabbath morning the pulpit of this church will be occupied by the Rev. H. G. Birchby, formerly of Peabody, Kas., but now pastor at La Jolla. All who know Dr. Birchby anticipate a great pleasure and profit in having him with us.

In the evening the pastor will preach at the 8 o'clock service on the "Beginning of All Things." This will be the first in a series of addresses upon New Lessons from the Old Records, to be given on Sabbath evenings.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH.

Miss Laura Carnock will speak Sunday 11 a. m., for the W. H. M. S. The pastor will speak in the evening 7:45 on "Lessons from Bunyon's Life," the first in the series on Pilgrim's Progress.

"The Proof of Faith" is the Epworth League subject. Jas. 2:14-17; 1 John 3:16-18. Nettie Watson, leader.

"Purity" is the prayer meeting subject. Ezekiel 36. Also read Isa. 52; Jas. 1:12-27; I Peter 2:1-12; Ps. 24.

Third Quarterly Conference Monday night. Dr. Mather, district superintendent, will be present.

You are invited to our services. The Sunday evening gospel talks for the summer will be short.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The crowded condition of the Sunday school has made necessary the purchase of a tent which will be placed on the lot near the church for the use of several classes. New members are enrolled each Sunday and the percentage of attendance of the enrollment is unusually large. Preparations are being made for a fine program to be given by the school in the evening of Children's Day, the second Sunday in June.

The monthly church social will be held in Filger hall, Fourth street near Glendale avenue, Friday evening, May 26, from eight until ten. This will be given by the young men and boys of the Sunday school to the young women and girls who won in the membership contest recently held. Some surprises are promised. All the members of the church and congregation and Sunday school and interested friends are invited.

Next Sunday morning the pastor will preach on the subject "The Sacrifice of the Past, the Inspiration of the Present," in anticipation of Memorial Day. Old soldiers and their friends, and all who love our country are invited. In the evening he will continue his series of sermons to young people begun last Sunday, taking for his subject, "Courtship." The older people as well as the young are invited.

The Women's Missionary Society will hold its monthly meeting at the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Pierce, 523 Ninth street, Thursday, June 1, at 2:30 p. m. All the women of the church and congregation are invited.

SCHOOL MEETING.

A meeting of the freeholders of the Glendale City Grammar School District is hereby called to be held Friday evening, May 26, from 8 to 10 o'clock, at Odd Fellows Hall, for the purpose of instructing the trustees in the matter of securing additional school grounds and building a school house or adding to the Sixth Street School, and for the calling of an election for the purpose of voting bonds for such purpose.

GLENDALE, CAL., MAY 26, 1911

President Wheeler of the state university has brought down upon his head a great deal of adverse criticism because of his advice to the members of the graduating class in regard to joining secret societies for the purpose of advancing their business or political career. The members of the secret societies who assail the learned gentleman for giving this advice, make a great mistake if they attempt to deny that his criticism is founded upon fact. If the secret societies should strike from their rolls the names of members who join them for the sake of helping their business or ministering to their political ambitions, their meetings would much more frequently lack a quorum. There is not necessarily anything unworthy in the motive, but to deny that it is not frequently the paramount influence in getting recruits for the secret orders, is to talk against facts.

A WAR CLOUD IN HONEYWELL.

The lady mayor of Honeywell, Kas., has appealed to the governor of the state to aid her in controlling the refractory male members of the city council who refuse to obey her in divers ways. She also complains that she has been caricatured in an English paper. The governor in reply advises her to keep cool, but at the same time assures her that she shall have his support even though he has to call out the militia. The matter threatens international complications which it is hoped may be adjusted diplomatically before it comes to a sanguinary conclusion, but one never can tell what will happen in "bloody Kansas." We can only hope that the men will keep themselves good; they ought to know better than to go contrary to the wishes of one of the dominant sex.

TAKE YOUR HOME PAPER.

The big dailies are now starting out an army of canvassers over the country to swell their subscription lists and incidentally add to the already plethoric bank accounts of their owners. The big daily is a necessity in its way, but it should not be allowed to get in the way of the small weekly that is published in and represents the home community. The typical good citizen will take the daily if he can afford to do so, but he will take the home weekly anyhow. Even the organ of the church or of the lodge, or the sheet that is the exponent of your particular fad, should not be allowed to stand in the way of your patronizing the home paper. You should help to support it in a true spirit of patriotism, feeling, as a member of the community which it is constantly laboring to build up, that if you do not assist in the work it is doing you are in the position of the person who is constantly receiving benefits which he is not paying for. Take the home paper and pay for it cheerfully. It will do you good.

THE SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT.

The suffrage amendment that the women of California are calling the attention of the voters of the state to, is as follows:

Every native citizen of the United States, every person who shall have acquired the rights of citizenship under or by virtue of the treaty of Quieretaro, and every naturalized citizen thereof, who shall have become such ninety days prior to any election, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of the state one year next preceding the election, and of the county in which he or she claims his or her vote ninety days, and in the election precinct thirty days, shall be entitled to vote at all elections which are now or may hereafter be authorized by law; provided no native of China, no idiot, no insane person, no person convicted of any infamous crime, no person hereafter convicted of the embezzlement or misappropriation of public money and no person who shall not be able to read the constitution in the English language and write his or her name, shall ever exercise the privileges of an elector in this state; provided that the provisions of this amendment relative to an educational qualification shall not apply to any person prevented by a physical disability from complying with its requisitions, nor to any person who now has the right to vote, nor to any person who shall be 60 years of age and upwards at the time this amendment shall take effect.

"A GREAT AND HOLY CAUSE?"

A resolution was introduced in the Ministers' Association the other day in Los Angeles, pledging that body to the support of the "equal rights" propaganda which it alludes to as "a great and holy cause." The resolution broke up the meeting all right after the warmest session that body has ever held. The seriousness with which some of the advocates of votes for women take themselves is remarkable. Possibly the question is a great one in the sense of being important, but wherein its holiness consits, is a problem that is incapable of any satisfactory solution. Socialists, Prohibitionists and a lot of other people are given to imagining that their particular theory as applied to government is the cure-all of human frailty and therefore "holy," but the world does not take them as seriously as they do themselves. The proponents of the equal suffrage movement are making a serious mistake in trying to drag the preachers into the contest and the preachers who are willing to be dragged into it will lose much through their inability to make the fine distinction between the high privilege of developing a human soul and of directing a human entity as to what are its particular everyday duties.

Whether woman shall vote or not is purely a question of policy, and the attempt to make it appear anyways different, except in degree, from many other political questions has a tendency to detract from rather than add to its dignity.

"UNREASONABLE RESTRAINT."

And now the muckrakers and some others are excited over the fact that a majority of the members of the Supreme Court of the United States have decided that the Standard Oil Company must not do certain things which the court declares constitute "an unreasonable restraint of trade." The critics of the court do not object to the oil magnates being restrained, but they object to their being restrained from doing things which are "unreasonable!" Gentlemen of the muckrake, in your insatiate desire to swat somebody higher up, what would you have? Would you have our friend John D. restrained in his ambition to do something "reasonable?" No? You don't want him restrained from doing things either reasonable or unreasonable, you merely wish to have him restrained! Ah, for a fleeting moment to catch your point of view. You tell us there is no "reasonable" restraint of trade. And yet you call our friend of the oily millions a "robber!" Not a casual, now-and-then robber, but one who is dyed in the wool, a night and day highwayman who goes about seeking very successfully those whom he may devour—makes a business of it in fact. From your own lips he is pronounced a robber whose trade is robbing! Shall he not be restrained from his unreasonable and shockingly successful "business?" Really should not his business be subject to restraint? Are you quite sure that all trade should be unrestrained? Lingers there a doubt in the deep recesses of your alleged mind that a member of the Supreme Court though necessarily a villain because of his high position, may possibly be guided by at least a vestige of justice when he intimates that a "restraint of trade," may, even be "reasonable?"

A SUCCESS.

The Glendale Mid-May Festival of last week was even a greater success than it appeared at first view. The advertising given us by the Los Angeles papers was worth a large proportion of the cost of the affair. In the nature of things everything about the arrangements was not perfect, but they were near enough to it for practical purposes. There were many who were of the opinion that Saturday would have been a better day for the affair, but the class of people who constituted the bulk of the crowd of visitors, showed this to be a mistake. They were not so much a "time killing" crowd as the half holiday would assume; on the contrary they were a class of people much more likely to become interested in this section and have aroused in their minds a desire to secure a residence among us. Among the visitors was a good representation of the tourist class who saw Glendale for the first time and were properly impressed. Another class represented were the Los Angeles dealers in realty, who as a general thing know less about this section than they should. Among the representatives of this class at Thursday's celebration were men who had been in the real estate business for years in Los Angeles and freely confessed that they "had no idea" of Glendale's growth and importance. Visitors were glad to receive newspapers and folders giving information in regard to Glendale and vicinity and we have no doubt that the day's festivities will be followed by tangible and desirable results for a considerable time to come. Certainly the affair was given in a generous spirit of hospitality which reflects credit upon the whole community.

Correspondence

JUST A FEW WORDS ABOUT OUR STREETS.

To the NEWS:

I am not Mr. Fixit, but I am public-spirited enough to want to see our streets maintained to the best advantage and at the least cost, and feel it my duty as a citizen, making a business specialty of municipal engineering, to offer a few suggestions as to the construction and maintenance of streets, and you can take it for what it is worth.

I think the average person gives very little thought or study to this subject, and submits to the expense of such work as a necessary evil, but will make a life study of how to get the greatest values from almost any other expenditure.

To begin with, I think our present method of taxing the abutting property owners for the construction of streets, and a general assessment for their maintenance, is wrong, inasmuch as it tempts the former to construct streets at minimum cost, regardless of values attained.

The next trip you make to Los Angeles on the Pacific Electric line, sit on the right side of the car and note at the crossing of San Fernando road two streets constructed practically at the same time. Here is an object lesson which we can all see. One street runs parallel to the Pacific Electric track to the Southern Pacific Railway crossing, and has less than one-tenth of the heavy traffic that the San Fernando road has, yet note the difference in condition today.

Mind you, I am not censuring the contractor. Doubtless they both did all they were required to do under their contracts. But the values obtained from the money expended is what I refer to, and we have object lessons all over our own city where streets with very little traffic of any kind are becoming covered with corrugations and chuck holes, and rapidly going to pieces, mainly owing, in my judgment, to a lack of thickness of foundation material and an insufficient binding strength in the surface material.

At present, while the good roads system is under construction, macadam material is at a premium, and would it not be better to wait until the rush of this work is over before starting any further extended construction of our present city streets?

I am as anxious as anyone to see Sixth street, throughout its entire length through the city, improved, but I am too poor to pay for a street that will go to pieces like some of our present streets are doing. Let's buy at a time and of such goods as to give us the best values.

Now, as to the maintenance of our present streets. We all want to see the best results from the expenditure of the little money we have available for that purpose.

In my judgment, the way to do this is to keep that big street roller moving over such streets as can be kneaded and rolled back into shape during these hot afternoons.

The proper city official could take his bicycle and a ten-cent map of the city, which can be obtained from the Glendale NEWS office, and soon inspect each street, and with a colored pencil indicate where this roller can be used to advantage.

This is a necessity. The cleaning of grass from the parkways is a luxury which every self-respecting resident should enjoy at his own expense. No one can say they ever observed weeds growing in front of my house, and they never will if I can help it.

Another thing that could be done at little cost, and meet with the approval of all pedestrians, is to throw a small furrow away from each side of the sidewalk where practicable, thereby preventing trash and coarse sand from sifting back on to the walk after having been swept. If there is any one thing that is wearing on one's nerves, it is that.

If you act on this "cheap advice," I may give you some more some day.

THE STROLLER.

LOS ANGELES THEATRES

MAJESTIC.

Seldom has any new theatrical organization made such an instantaneous hit as that scored by the Idora Comic Opera Company at Hamburger's Majestic theater this week in "Mlle. Modiste." In this city of numerous attractions a company must show a high order of talent to make an impression. For the second offering of the special summer engagement the Idoras will stage an elaborate production of James T. Powers' great success, "The Jewel of Asia." Like the first piece produced, this will be offered for the first time to local playgoers at popular prices, and will be staged with the utmost regard for detail, costumes and brilliant scenic effects.

This musical comedy will afford James McElhern, the principal comedian of the company, a role in which he has won laughs and laurels all through the East. As Pierre Larouge an artist who is forced by circumstances to act as a waiter, he gives an interpretation that is one of the most humorous in his extensive repertoire. Agnes Cain-Brown will sing the title role, which abounds with beautiful music; Aileen Flaven, as Mimi, will be given the opportunity of displaying her talents which is denied her in the present offering. The remainder of the company will be in congenial assignments.

"The Jewel of Asia" is the work of Harry B. Smith and Ludwig Englander, who have collaborated in some of the greatest successes in this kind of entertainment. The locale of the first act is Paris, from whence it takes a long jump to Turkish-Asia. It revels in color and the happenings in the closing harem scene are among the funniest situations in the entire realm of musical comedy.

BURBANK.

"The Arab," Edgar Selwyn's new play of the Orient, has been such a success at the Burbank theater, that it will start on its third week with the regular Sunday matinee. The seal of success was finally stamped upon it in the past week by Henry B. Harris, who announced that he was so well pleased with it that he would use it to open his Hudson theater, New York, September 11. Mr. Harris came from New York to Los Angeles to see this piece in action, having previously read the manuscript, and after seeing the performance, the noted manager and producer said, "The Burbank production of this play is delightful and if I can do as well in New York I will be perfectly satisfied." Consequently this will undoubtedly be the last stock production for years to come, as after the New York production "The Arab" will be played on the road. The notable thing about "The Arab" is that it introduces to the playgoing public an entirely new character, Jamil Abdullah Azam, "dhe greates' dhragoman in dhe worl'," and it is with the introduction of such a novel personage that great successes are made, such as "The Chorus Lady," "The Traveling Salesman," and other famous modern plays. Around this single character Mr. Selwyn has woven as speedy and pretty a romance as could be desired.

This will be the last week of "The Arab," which will be followed by another new play, to be produced in New York in the fall. This is "The Flirt," and its author is Mrs. Selwyn (Margaret Mayo) who wrote the tremendous success, "Baby Mine." Mr. Selwyn will play in his wife's production at the Burbank, and the leading feminine role will be in the hands of Miss Mabel Morrison, daughter of Lewis Morrison of "Faust" fame. Miss Morrison, off the stage, is Mrs. Richard Bennett, wife of the popular actor who will play a special engagement at the Burbank following "The Flirt."

TELEPHONE COMPANY GIVES RECEPTION.

Next Saturday the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, (Sunset) gives a reception to the public at its offices on Brand boulevard From 10 a. m. to 8 p. m., visitors will be received and shown over the rooms and an explanation given of the workings of an up-to-date telephone office. It is not often that the general public is admitted to look into the inner workings of the "Hello" business and there is no doubt but that a large number of people will avail themselves of the opportunity to learn something of the system by which it is operated.

IMPROVEMENTS AT SANITARIUM.

Manager Wessels contemplates changing the present gymnasium building into a 3-story addition to the sanitarium proper connected with the main building by galleries. The new addition will be divided into wards each one of which will be capable of accommodating several patients. This arrangement will make it possible for persons desiring the sanitarium treatment, but feeling unable to pay the prices now charged for single room accommodations, to obtain treatment and the ordinary care at considerable less expense than now attaches to the more private care given to patients in rooms. This change will go far to poularize this very meritorious institution.

MR. W. E. EVANS, GLENDALE'S CITY ATTORNEY.

As Mr. Evans, who has just been appointed city attorney of Glendale may not be known to some of our citizens, the NEWS takes pleasure in introducing him.

Mr. Evans was born in London, Ky., 33 years ago, and was admitted to the bar in that state in 1902. He came to Los Angeles in 1907, and falling in love with California and one of California's daughters, returned to his native state for a short time only and came back to California to make this state his home. He came to Glendale in 1909 and soon afterwards formed a law partnership with Mattison B Jones under the firm name of Jones and Evans with offices in the H. W. Hellman block in Los Angeles. Mr Evans has very laudatory credentials from the judge of the circuit court in Kentucky before which he practiced He resides on Orange street, Glendale.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

The Tuesday Afternoon Club held a very interesting meeting at the annual election of its officers last Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Mary Gridley, the president of the past year, though strongly urged to accept a second nomination, was obliged to decline because of other pressing duties.

Mrs. A. W. Tower was elected president by a large majority; Mrs. P. S. McNutt was elected vice president, Mrs. S. Grosvenor, secretary; Mrs. Clarence Newcomb, treasurer, and Mrs. C. C. Campbell was elected a member of the directors board.

Mrs. F. G. Taylor, the club's first president, and Mrs. Mary H. Gridley were made honorary members; the membership to take effect the first of the coming club year. Interesting reports of the state convention were made by Mrs. A. W. Tower and Mrs. Mary H. Gridley.

The conditions of Mrs. Bundy, sister of Mr. L. H. Hurtt, remains very serious, causing anxiety to her friends and relatives.

CHAPTER VII.

IT was while they were standing, still somewhat confused, that Lillian appeared in the doorway and cast a sharp glance at them both.

"You have not mended that pink frock of mine, Elsie," said Lillian in honeyed tones. "Really, my dear, I had hoped to find it done. I would like to wear it this afternoon. Better see to it right away."

Elsie nodded and hurriedly left the room.

"I am afraid you are a sad flirt," charged Lillian, shaking her finger at Phillip. "Already you are embarrassing that pretty little maid whom you were accidentally kind enough to send to me."

"Has Mr. Breed come in?" asked Phillip, deliberately ignoring her accusation.

"Now I know there is something in all this flirtation," she laughed, though still somewhat piqued. "Yes, Mr. Breed has come in, and he is waiting for you in the library." And with a coyness that he would not see she led him downstairs to where Henry Breed received him with extreme cordiality.

"Well done, my boy, well done!" said he, shaking hands with Phillip. "Come back and look at my picture gallery now."

In a room opening off the library to the right of the fireplace, where Breed now led him with the glee of a schoolboy, a row of photographs ran around the wall just above the wainscot. They were the photographs of all the more important men of Wall street, but now upon each photograph there was an X shaped mark of red ink.

"I checked them off as they fell, one by one," said Breed, with infinite malice in his withered old face. "Five years ago, when they made that attack on me and beat down my cereal stocks to almost nothing, I vowed that I would put them out of existence, and I have done it," and he rubbed his thin hands together. "With your help, my boy," he hastily added, "with your plan and your genius and your own hatred—and with my resources. We are a great team, my son. I have had reports about you. I know every move you made, what you did in every hour that you were in New York. How much money did you make of your own?"

Phillip drew a long breath. "Nearly half a million," he replied.

"That is right," said Breed, nodding his head with emphasis. "It was in a good cause, eh, Lillian?"

The girl laughed for answer. It was a good cause.

"It is all in a good cause," Breed continued, as if arguing against some accuser. "Business will be healthier. The Stock Exchange, instead of a mere clearing house for countless bucket shops, will become once more a place for the legitimate exchange of securities. It is a great work I have done for the country, but they won't realize it until I am dead. Your deals, Phillip? Is every one closed that could be closed?"

"Every one," returned Phillip with satisfaction. "In a few cases I could not secure stocks I wanted, but for the greater part I did. Those who could not pay had nothing to pay with."

"Right again!" and once more Henry Breed nodded his head vigorously. "The stocks were the main thing after we got back all our cash. Come! I will show you something that no one ever saw but Lillian and myself. Where is Zelphan?" He looked cautiously all round the room.

"He is out in the park," said Lillian.

"I don't want him to see or to know. Come this way."

Back from this apartment was a bedroom, and in it was a closet hung neatly with clothes on hangers. Breed fumbled about for a moment at the back of this closet, when suddenly the whole rear wall swung slowly upon its center. They passed through into a narrow passage concealed between the chimneys of the two rooms, and from this after swinging the closet wall shut behind them the three passed down one long stairway and then another into a deep subcellar steel lined, like a deposit vault, with four cell-like passages, the heavy steel doors of each secured with a combination lock. Breed led them slowly through, pushing advance electric buttons as he went.

"Absolutely impregnable, this vault," said he in considerable pride. "Armies could not get through it unless they knew how. The walls are six feet thick, of alternate layers of steel plate and cellulose, which dynamite could hardly destroy. The plates were shipped here from Germany in plain boxes, and German workmen were brought here directly from the ship without the slightest knowledge of where they were going. When the work was done they were sent away, and not one of the men knows where he was. Look here." He led them into an inner vault, and here were row upon row of iron drawers filled with greenbacks neatly bound in packages, with the amounts marked on the outside. At the end of the vault were rows of drawers filled with gold in coin and ingots.

"Money!" said Breed, gloating over the contents as he opened and closed these drawers. "Money!" said he, and he rubbed his lean old hands together, while his eyes began to gleam. "Not all these receptacles are filled, though. When I had these vaults built I calculated how much money there was in the United States and built in enough drawers to hold it."

There was something so sinister in the way he said this that even Phillip, himself seething with enormous ambitions, was startled.

Lillian plucked Phillip by the sleeve and drew him outside the vault.

"He always likes to be alone when he is down here," she whispered.

Phillip stopped in the second passage to examine with interest the heavy hanging of the door. Lillian drew quite near him and slipped her hand within his arm. He could feel the warmth of that hand instantly. He was afraid of this girl, afraid of himself. The thrill she gave him was not like that which he had shared with Elsie. With Elsie it was love; with this girl—he drew slightly away.

"Suppose anything should happen to Mr. Breed?" he asked. "What would become of this vault? I presume its combinations are written in some safe place?"

"They are not written anywhere," she told him. "There is only one person in all the world besides my grandfather who knows how to get in here, and that person is myself. Of course I would not tell it, would I?"

He looked down at her. He half bent forward, seized with a mad impulse to take her in his arms. He was ashamed of that impulse.

"You must keep away from me!" said he harshly. "There are things I want to do—big things!"

The girl laughed lightly, well content for the time, but a shrill chuckle startled them both and made them turn hastily. Old Henry Breed stood in the door of the vault, rubbing his hands softly together.

"Good!" said he. "Good, Phillip, my boy! I knew you were about it. You keep as strong as that and I will make you anything you want to be—anything!"

Out in the library they found the gaunt wireless operator, whose eyes seemed to have the peculiar catlike property of shining in the darkness. The operator was just turning on the lights, and a flash of lightning outlined him as he reached up to press the hanging bulb.

"I have a wireless for you, sir," he said to Mr. Breed. The old man took the yellow slip and drew under the chandelier. Presently he turned to Phillip triumphantly:

"The board of governors of the New York Stock Exchange, after having suspended the exchange for a week in a vain attempt to straighten out their muddle, have just called a meeting of the members, and the only fo r to attend were four of the five wit a whom you did business. The seats of all the others are for sale, and there are no buyers. The Stock Exchange," and his voice rose to a shrill and tremulous shriek, "is wiped out of existence! There is no Stock Exchange!"

At a very early hour the next morning, in his bedroom near the top of the house, the gaunt wireless operator was upon his knees before his open trunk, his long fingers slowly turning the knob of a combination lock. It was mounted upon a plain iron plate and was now temporarily clamped upon the front edge of the trunk to keep it in its normal vertical position. Blagg, as he turned the knob, kept his eyes carefully averted from it, but he listened most intently. Presently his acute fingers caught the faintest perceptible shade of difference as quickly as, if not quicker than, his ears, for they stopped rigidly upon the instant. Blagg now looked at the dial, then consulted a small card which he held in his left hand, and a look of intense satisfaction, amounting almost to fierceness, flashed into his beady eyes. The last number of the involved combination had been found by the sense of touch and hearing alone!

"Cash!" he whispered. "Millions of cash, all gathered into one place!"

He changed the combination, marked it carefully upon his card and started once more, with averted eyes and intent ears, to turn the knob.

In an office on the second floor Phillip Kelvin stood over a large hand drawn map, on which every mile of every railroad in the United States was carefully set down in strong lines, though in inks of six different colors, indicating the six main financial groups. Starting from the network of lines radiating from New York, Phillip's clear eyes followed each road in turn, ramification by ramification, to the end, going slowly and pausing over each branch as if to fix more firmly in his mind certain facts connected with it.

"To make these all one color," he mused; "that will be one step. Then, with millions of cash"—

In his deep subcellar vault, dynamite proof, electric drill proof, army proof, old Henry Breed stood before his rows upon rows of iron drawers. One of them was open, and the electric light glinted upon gold. Breed rubbed his withered hands together.

"Cash!" he gloated. "Millions of cash and millions more to come!"

There was the sound of a bell in the big two story hall. Blagg hastily stopped his practice, restored his combination lock to its strong box, turned triple keys upon it and double locked his trunk.

Down into the vault tripped Lillian Breed, her dark cheeks red from her brisk morning walk, her dark eyes bright, her scarlet lips parted over her white teeth. "I hurried in just ahead of Dr. Zelphan, grandfather," she said. "He will be here in a moment. The breakfast bell rang as I came in at the door."

With the haste of a boy Breed followed her out through the four vestibules, closing the heavy doors of each one behind him, throwing off the combination of its lock and turning out the lights beyond.

"And in all this world only we two know," he said.

"Mr. Kelvin knows," she reminded him.

"But not the combinations," he hastened to assure her. "Do you know how I have won my supremacy? It is by finding big men to do both my planning and my executing; by knowing such men when I see them. Kelvin is one of these, and to such a man as he the greatest incentive that can be given him is to show him the tools with which he may work. I showed him these enormous stores of actual cash for that purpose, and the knowledge is safe with him. I know men. This is not a game of tennis, at which a woman can play. I have taken you into my confidence this far only because in case anything should happen to me I want you to get at the stores that will make you the richest woman in the world."

"Dr. Zelphan will be hunting you," she reminded him.

Aroused from his momentary forgetfulness of his one bugbear, the shrewd specialist whom he had employed to look after his health and who, in that capacity, had become a necessarily oppressive burden, he hurried up through the one room in his house to which Zelphan had been denied access, and with Lillian passed into the hall where Dr. Zelphan stood awaiting them.

"You promised when I left you here at the house this morning to join me at the head of Big lake," he charged Breed. "If I cannot take your word for a longer morning walk, I shall have to stay by you until you do. Put on your hat and heavy coat."

"But breakfast is ready," protested Lillian.

The doctor peered at her with such open contempt that she flushed and straightened her shoulders. It was evident that there was something deeply antagonistic between these two.

"If I employ a man to make me do things I suppose I ought to do them." Breed laughed and, securing his hat and coat, went out with the Spartan doctor just as Phillip came down the stairway.

Lillian waited for Phillip and tucked her arm playfully into his as he stepped from the bottom stair. "I almost had the honor of going in to breakfast with my grandfather," she said gayly, "but see how much greater honor my disappointment brings me."

"I admit it," said Phillip, with a smile, "only you are not expressing my merit strongly enough to do me justice."

In the dining room they found only Mrs. Rensselaer and her nephew. Mrs. Rensselaer bowed stiffly to Phillip.

"How charming you are looking this morning, child!" she exclaimed. "Did you ever see such a picture of health, Herbert?"

"She is the goddess of the morning," he stated, "the very liqueur of life, the very spirit of spring, the very quintessence of what you may call 'em. Howdy, Miss Lillian?"

(To be continued)

One Story Eclipsed.

"Hot in Brazil?" said the young man who had just returned from a trip to South America. "Well, I should say so. Do you know, for days at a time we couldn't take our after dinner siesta on account of the peculiar noises."

"What noises?" asked the blond stenographer innocently.

"Why, the coffee popping on the trees. You see, the sun was so hot the grains just roasted before they were picked."

The old traveler yawned.

"Rather warm down there, bub," he rejoined laconically, "but when I was down there you couldn't sleep at night. Every once in awhile there would sound the most extraordinary crackling noise that ever fell upon the human ear."

"What were the sounds, Mr. Bings?"

And Mr. Bings yawned again and replied, "The rubber trees stretching themselves."—Chicago News.

Where One's Breath Falls as Snow.

Verkholansk, a small village in the northeast of Siberia, is the coldest place in the world. It is a convict station. No precautions against escape are needed, for Verkholansk is guarded by the wind. Though the average temperature of the three worst winter months is 85 degrees of frost, intense cold like this is easy to bear in calm weather. But a strong breeze at that temperature or within 20 degrees of it will kill every living thing not under shelter. In the icy cold of Verkholansk an iron ax head dropped on the ground smashes like glass. A board of unseasoned wood, on the other hand, freezes as hard as steel. Frozen nicotine blocks the stem of tobacco pipes, while one's breath falls at one's feet in a fine white powder.

Experience Teaches.

"I wonder what has happened to Mr. Green?" said Mrs. Brown to a lady friend. "He seems so dismal now, and he used to be a practical joker!"

"Ah," was the response, "he proposed as a joke to his present wife. She accepted him, and he says he will never indulge in a joke again."

God gives every bird its food, but does not throw it into the nest.—Tillcomb.

Foolhardy Snake Keeper.

The only fatal case of snake bite on record in the London zoological gardens was directly due to the foolishness of the victim. He was in charge of the snakes and, coming in one morning with some friends, began to boast of his power over the creatures and the extent to which they would submit to be played with by one whom they knew. This led to practical experiments. The overconfident keeper took an Indian cobra from its comfortable sleeping place and, declaring he was a snake charmer, proceeded to swing it about his head and play other tricks with it. A native snake charmer would have known there was no more certain way to rouse the snake's temper than this, for the race abhors rough handling or sudden movement of any sort. The result of the exploit was that the keeper was bitten on the nose. He was hurried off to the hospital, but died in a few hours.—London Globe.

The Dreadful Looking Person.

Rodin, the world famous French sculptor, has had a wonderful career, and, like most men who have risen from obscurity to fame, he still preserves much of the simplicity of his early days. One day he was entertaining a few artists, among them a German who had never before visited the sculptor. At dinner they were waited on by a particularly plain looking woman.

"I'm surprised," remarked the German during one of the woman's absences from the room, "that you should have such a very dreadful looking person about you. Why don't you get a nice, good looking young housekeeper?"

There was a sudden ghastly silence. Then Rodin smiled.

"I don't like to be waited on at meals by servants," he explained. "The dreadful looking person is my wife."

"The Texas of Europe."

In the reminiscences of Mrs. T. P. O'Connor, "I Myself," the author tells of her first meeting with Henry James, whom she calls "a sort of Massachusetts Sir Galahad:"

The first time I met him I sat next him at a dinner. I had just come to London, and he asked me if I liked it. I said I hadn't made up my mind, and he said I would—that in London you were allowed every independence of opinion and action, only you must contribute something socially—beauty (and he bowed very courteously to me, and I bowed very prettily to him) or wit or agreeableness—and then London accepted you. I said: "History repeats itself. In Texas, where I was born, they say a man is not asked his nationality, his religion or his politics, but only if he is a good fellow." "Ah," said Mr. James, "then London is the Texas of Europe."

Jolted Mark Twain.

"Mark Twain," said a magazine editor, "brought out 'Joan of Arc' anonymously. Before he acknowledged its authorship he sometimes fished for compliments about it. One evening at a dinner he said carelessly to a senator:

"'Are you a novel reader?'

"'Yes, a great novel reader,' was the reply.

"'I don't suppose you're following that anonymous new serial, "Joan of Arc?"'

"'Indeed I am, though, every installment.'

"'What do you think of it? Is it good?'

"'That's hardly a fair question to ask me,' the senator, who knew the book's real author, replied. 'You see, I wrote "Joan of Arc" myself.'"

Brides in Iceland.

A quaint old superstition in Iceland is that every bride must invite all her friends to a dinner in her own home and every article of food must be prepared by the bride herself. If she is successful in pleasing her guests she not only receives praise for her own skill, but helps along her younger sisters, who are then assumed to be equally good at cooking and consequently have a much better chance of getting married.

Woolgathering.

"For one's wits to go woolgathering" is an allusion to a pitiful industry sometimes seen in older countries. In parts of France, Germany and Spain very old people are sometimes employed in gathering wool from bushes in sheep pastures, where it has been plucked from the fleece as the animals pass too close to the branches.

Kind Little Boy.

"Has my boy been a little defender and been kind to dumb animals today?"

"Yes, grandma. I let your canary out of the cage, and when my cat caught it I set Towser on her."

A Change of Opinion.

"I suppose, old fellow, your wife still thinks she married a treasure?" remarked a bachelor to a married friend.

"No," said the benedict; "I have a distinct impression that she regards me as a treasury!"

A Soft Answer.

The wife of a man who came home late insisted upon a reason.

"When I go out without you," he said, "I do not enjoy myself half as much, and it takes me twice as long."

Must Have Been Poor.

OPEN THE DOOR.

Open the door of your heart, my lad,
To the angel of love and truth
When the world is full of unnumbered joys
In the beautiful dawn of youth,
Casting aside all things that mar,
Saying to wrong, "Depart!"
To the voices of hope that are calling you
Open the door of your heart.

Open the door of your heart, my lass,
To the things that shall abide,
To the holy thoughts that lift your soul
Like the stars at eventide.
All the fadeless flowers that bloom
In the realms of song and art
Are yours if you'll only give them room.
Open the door of your heart.

Open the door of your heart, my friend,
Heedless of class and creed,
When you hear the cry of a brother's voice,
The sob of a soul in need.
To the singing heavens that o'er you bend
You need no map nor chart,
But only the love of the Master.
Open the door of your heart.

—Edward Everett Hale.

VOTES FOR WOMEN, OR NOT.

I have been surprised that no one has accepted your invitation, given several weeks ago, to discuss the important topic of Woman's Suffrage. In less than five months we shall be called on to decide whether the women of the state of California shall be admitted to the electorate or not. It is a moot interesting proposition, and as there seem to be many conflicting opinions concerning it, I hope some of the readers of the NEWS will come forward and debate the question in your columns, so that at least we in Glendale may not be behind the fashion of the times, for indeed, you can hardly pick up a news sheet anywhere or any day and not find one or the other side voluminously represented in print.

This is entirely as it should be, for a more important question has not been presented for settlement for many decades, and it may be hoped that out of the multitude of councellors wisdom may finally emerge.

There appears a disposition in some quarters to claim for the "gentle sex" higher moral virtues than are possessed by "mere man" with a consequent expectation that the entry of the ladies into politics would be at once followed by an age of truth and justice, religion and piety among us for all generations. Against any such idea can be set the notorious fact that in many states and countries where women have been voting, especially in county and municipal elections for many years, the affairs of such states, counties and municipalities do not appear to have attained a higher moral status than those administered exclusively by men, and indeed we may be thankful that neither sex has a monopoly of the virtues, or the vices.

All over the civilized world today women are distinguishing themselves in medicine, art, science, literature and the drama, and filling important positions of trust with credit to themselves, and to those whom they serve.

Now it would seem perfectly right and proper that as woman has shown herself so successful in these higher departments of human activity, she should be invited to assist mankind in the no less important duties of affairs of state.

But the proposed amendment gives every woman a vote, (and it is uncertain whether that includes girls down to 18 years of age or not. There are already too many voters, for in adopting universal male suffrage we have admitted not only the "good men and true," but a host of admittedly "undesirables." Why, for instance, should an illiterate tramp, with no stake in the community, but who can make out a temporary residence at election time, be able to counteract the vote of the taxpayer, the inetlligent hard worker, the farmer, the merchant or the college professor.

Universal male suffrage is a colossal mistake, but unfortunately it is too late to correct it. But because we have acted unwisely in this matter, it would seem worse than folly to commit the grave error of adopting universal woman suffrage.

The advocates of this idea claim it as a right of womanhood, and it may be conceded that it is just as right for a woman to vote as for a man. The fact is there should be no sex qualification in the matter at all, but there should certainly be qualification of some sort; as without it we shall simply be changing our whole theory of government, doubling the expense, doubling the ignorant, trebling the indifferent vote, running all the grave risks of a radical social and political revolution in our already complicated systems without any compensating advantage whatever.

If some modified scheme of woman suffrage could be worked out, or an educational and proeprty-owning basis it would deserve, and probably receive, the hearty support of all thoughtful men, and I am well assured would be perfectly acceptable to the more moderate and rational portion of the suffragettes themseles.

Until some such modification is introduced into the proposition it will in my humble opinion be exceedingly unwise to make any change. I therefore urge all men to vote "No" on Amendment No. 8 to be presented to us on the 10th of October next. We certainly should welcome the aid of intelligent womankind in our politics, but unfortunately there are many others.

J. L. W.

THE CURE OF OLD AGE.

In his interesting book "Old Age Deferred," an edition of which has just been issued, Dr. Arnold Lorand of Carlsbad, Austria, sets forth the doctrine that old age is a preventable disease which can be successfully combatted with the hopeful expectation of a life of vigorous physical and mental activity up to at least one hundred years. Moderation, fresh air, plenty of exercise, plenty of water, and a cheerful mind appear to sum up the treatment recommended. Dr. Lorand is neither a vegetarian nor a teetotaler, and while admitting that far too much meat is eaten, contends that a strict vegetarian diet is not only unwise, but in many cases actually dangerous if persistently followed. We are informed that "the best nourishment for increasing the chances of a long life and to defer the effects of old age, is a diet consisting of little meat, much milk and vegetables." Equally striking are the learned doctor's views on tea and coffee-drinking, and he leaves the cold-water theorists no better pleased than the wine-bibbiers. He says, "If wine be used it should be good red wine, which is far less injurious in moderation than tea and coffee in large quantities. Unfortunately those who fanatically fight against alcohol, indulge in many cups of black coffee or tea daily, and thus poison their nervous systems besides set up the formation of many poisonous compounds which ultimately derange and impair all their functions.

Dr. Lorand admits that the means to be taken to attain longevity may be considered as eccentric, but he says he would prefer for his part to live to be 100, even at the cost of being branded as "eccentric."

Almost as important as physical moderation, the constant and congenial exercise of the mind is absolutely necessary to a useful old age. How many men leading active business lives, suddenly deciding to retire to a life of leisure, but having developed no hobby, and having no interest in life, have died of old age, when they should have been enjoying life in vigorous manhood. Gardening is said to be the old man's friend, and indeed nothing more delightful can be imagined than for our retired city clerks and merchants to withdraw from the crowded mart, the busy hum of trade, to the quiet of rural life, there to watch with ever increasing interest the fruits of their moderate toil. Mind and body are thus being refreshed and renewed at the same time and life takes on an added interest that lets us gently down the slopes toward eventide.

X-RAY.

NOTICE OF SALE.

Tropico Mining and Milling Company. Location of principal place of business according to original articles at Tropico, in the County of Los Angeles, California, but said principal place of business changed to the City of Los Angeles, in said Los Angeles County.

There is delinquent upon the following described stock on account of assessment levied on the 10th day of March, 1911, the several amounts set opposite the names of the respective stockholders as follows:

Names.	No. of Certificate.	No. of Shares.	Amt.
Geo. C. Melrose....	16	5,000	$100
Geo. C. Melrose....	19	13,000	$260
B. W. Richardson	20	5,000	$100

And in accordance with law and an order of the Board of Directors made on the 10th day of Mach, 1911, so many shares of each parcel of such stock as may be necessary will be sold at the office of the Secretary, to wit, 446-448 Wilcox Building, on the southeast corner of Second and Spring Streets, in the City of Los Angeles, Cal., on the 9th day of June, 1911, at the hour of 1:30 o'clock p. m. of such day, to pay delinquent assessments thereon, together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

WILLIAM CHAMBERS,
Secretary of Said Corporation.

Office of Secretary, Rooms 446-448 Wilcox Building, in the City of Los Angeles, Cal.

Three of Them.

Dearborn—Do you know the seven wonders of the world? Wabash—Well, I know three of them. Dearborn—Only three? Wabash—Yes. I've only got three sons, you know.—Exchange.

The Polite Chesterfield.

A nobleman of questionable veracity told Lord Chesterfield one day that he had drunk six bottles of champagne.

"That is more than I can swallow," remarked his lordship.

A Historic Irish Bull.

Notwithstanding the large amount paid for medicine and medical attendance very few deaths occurred during the year.—From an Irish Benevolent Society's Report.

The Awakening.

The hallway was dark. He softly came behind her and kissed her lightly on the cheek. She didn't scream. She didn't even look around. And he darted away undiscovered.

A little later he met her in the parlor.

"Then you knew who it was?" he said.

"Knew who it was?" she repeated. "Knew who it was that kissed you?" She gave a sudden start.

"Good land, was it you?" she cried. And there was something in her tone that sent him up to the dressing room, where he glared at himself in the glass and kicked his own shins vigorously.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

An Authority.

Peter McArthur was once talking with a friend when he quoted another man as a financial authority. His friend disputed the right of the person quoted to be considered an expert. Mr. McArthur insisted that the man had a right to speak like an oracle.

"What is your definition of an authority?" asked his friend.

"My idea of an authority," retorted Mr. McArthur, "is a person who bluffs beyond my limit."

Severe Critics.

Alice—I like Tom immensely, and he's very much the gentleman, but he does like to talk about himself! Grace—Yes, dear, your knight hath a thousand Ps.—Puck.

Not Wholly Educated.

She—So you have an educated dog! Do you let him go to the postoffice for your mail? He—No. I am afraid he might take it to my wife first.—Paris Rire.

Put Them Aside.

Grief for things past that cannot be remedied and care for things to come that cannot be prevented may easily hurt but can never benefit one.

The future is purchased by the present.—Johnson.

The Woman Question.

Tommy—Pa! Pa—Well, what is it now? Tommy—What's "the woman question?" Pa—Did you mail that letter?—Toledo Blade.

Testing the "Bud."

An old bachelor had somehow strayed into a young people's party, and, realizing that he could not hope among so many handsome youths to make the heart of a single maiden throb, he said to the nearest girl, whose conversation had shown somewhat more good sense than he had expected:

"Look about the ballroom. Notice that the girls who have removed their gloves have well shaped arms. And—ahem!—some have not removed them"—

"But neither generalization fits me," answered the girl, "for, you see, I have one arm bare and one gloved. What would you say about me?"

"Walk out and let me look at them," said the old bachelor unfeelingly.

The girl took a few steps out, paused and returned.

"Take the other glove off," said the old bachelor.—New York Times.

A Policeman's Advice to Tolstoy.

Count Tolstoy once saw in Moscow a policeman dragging in a most rude manner a drunken moujik to the station. The count stopped the policeman and said to him:

"Canst thou read?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"And hast thou read the gospel?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then thou must know that we must not offend our neighbor."

The policeman looked at the unpretentious figure of his interrogator and asked him in his turn:

"Canst thou read?"

"Yes," replied the count.

"And hast thou read the instructions for policemen?"

"No."

"Well, go and read them first and then come back and talk with me."—From the Anglo-Russian.

The Thirsty Elm.

It has been computed that if the leaves of an elm tree sixty feet high were spread out on the ground edge to edge they would cover five acres of land. These leaves, averaging 7,000,000 to a full grown tree, will absorb water to the amount of seven tons during the normal summer day. Were it not for the ingathering by the stomata during the night a few elms would soon draw off all the water from a district.

On Thursday (May Festival Day) the Sanitarium kept open house and a number of visitors took occasion to visit the institution and put their names on the register, in addition to the regular guests named above.

WANTED FOR ROBBERY.

Judge Whomes put into the hands of Marshal Miller Wednesday morning a warrant for the arrest of a man name unknown, but designated as Ben Perry, charged with the robbery of B. Okayama at 581 West Second street. It seems that the Japanese had taken the white man into his cabin and upon getting up in the morning found that the latter had disappeared, taking with him the sum of $45 belonging to his host, also a gold watch. Up to the time of going to press the man had not been found.

A Snake Story.

This story is told of the late Dr. Emil Reich. One day when traveling he lay down to rest in the shadow of a bush and fell asleep. He awoke with a start to find that night was coming on and that rain had begun to fall. Quickly snatching up his umbrella, he tried to open it and, finding it worked stiffly, he pressed the spring vigorously. Suddenly there was a sound of ripping and tearing and a snake fell to the ground split in two. The reptile had apparently swallowed the umbrella as far as it could!

Miss Lillian Ellias and Miss Margarete Eddleman returned last week from Stanford, where they have completed their second term. A reception was tendered by a number of their Tropico and Glendale friends at the home of Miss Eddleman on Central avenue Saturday evening.

The Interurban Sentinel issued an illustrated supplement with their last edition. The illustrations are very good and the reading matter is logical and convincing. If these supplements were sent East by the Sentinel's readers they would doubtless do much toward persuading others to locate in this pretty city.

Cards are out announcing the coming marriage of Norton Chamberlain Wells, president of the Forest Lawn Cemetery association, to Miss Florence Mabelle Hyde, the affair to take place on June 5th. Miss Hyde is a daughter of Mrs. Jeffora Hyde of San Jose, Cal.

Miss Muriel Turner was pleasantly surprised at the home of her stepfather, J. J. Laws on Palmer avenue, Friday, the affair being given to celebrate her thirteenth birthday anniversary. The girls who enjoyed the affair were Blanche Cramer, Margarete Meckie, Lilie Shea, Elsie Utter, Mildred Croy and Florence Chandler.

Invitations have been issued for the graduation exercises of the Eighth grade of the Tropico grammar school, which will take place in the Glendale Union High school auditorium on the evening of Thursday, June 1st. An exhibition of the work done by the different grades during the year will be on exhibition on May 26th.

W. G. Black reports the following sales this week: Lot 50x140 in the Park avenue tract, west of the Southern Pacific tracks, to Mrs. Eulalie Taylor; the price reported being $675. Lot, same as above in description, to Mrs. Charles Hopkins. The price paid was $675. Both of these are corner lots. Two lots in this tract to Mrs. S. H. McCommon. These are inside lots of the same size and the price paid was $550.

A social dance will be given in Logan's hall on San Fernando road this (Friday) evening. Invitations were issued this week. The affair will be under the direction of Mesdames Conrad, Bullis, Davenport, Stevenson, Logan, Webster and Ballentyne. This dance will be given for the purpose of raising funds to complete the payment on the lot on which will be erected the library building and club house.

After passing the last three years in Mexico, Worth Bancroft returned to his home at this place last week. He tells many interesting stories about the war in the country to the South. One story is that he made three attempts to return to the states. The first two attempts were unsuccessful, on both occasions the party being held up and their valuables taken. He is surprised with the remarkable growth of this city.

TROPICO'S NEW INDUSTRY.

Last Sunday's TIMES contains an amusing account of the activity of Tropico's city authorities, the recorder and town marshal, in catching and imposing heavy fines on the automobile speeders whom they catch as they go scorching through the young municipality. The article is embellished by a pretty good likeness of Judge Shuey as he sits in state in the recorder's court, busy fining the unfortunates whom Marshal Fishback hauls before him. We learn from the same authority that City Trustee B. W. Richardson was himself one of the victims of the indiscriminate levy made by the impartial pair of officials. Our sympathies are entirely with the officers of the law and will be until we get our automobile.

Commencement Portraits

You must see my new line of samples. They are exclusive and have artistic taste that is rare. Priced especially for graduates.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

Memorial services will be held by the N. P. Banks Post and Corps in the G. A. R. hall next Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock. Comrade West will be in charge assisted by Comrade Robert Taylor. An invitation is extended to all to attend.

Following is the program which will be rendered: Song, Marple quartet; prayer, Rev. C. R. Norton, pastor of the Casa Verdugo Methodist church; selection, ladies quartet; scripture reading, Rev. J. W. Utter, pastor of the Central Christian church of Glendale; song, Marple quartet; Memorial sermon, Comrade Cheney of Glendale; song, America, audience; benediction

Services will be held at the Grand View cemetery on Decoration Day at 10 o'clock in the morning. It is expected that all the grammar schools of the valley will attend this service in a body. Following the service will come the decorating of the graves. At the Sunday service all old soldiers and the members of the Corps are requested to be at the hall by 2:45 at the latest.

COL. A. H. SELLERS PASSES AWAY.

Sad news indeed to many residents of this valley comes the news of the death of Col. A. H. Sellers of Pasadena, which occurred last Saturday evening. Death came after an illness of several months. Col. Sellers was 72 years of age. While residing in Pasadena the deceased was much taken with this valley, which he visited quite often. The body is being taken to Chicago, Col. Sellers' former home, for burial. Mrs. Sellers, who left for the East on the same train as the casket, was accompanied by Mrs. J. H. Seaman, who will probably remain with her until she returns to California.

Mrs. William Harvey, jr., sister-in law of Col. Sellers, was at the bedside of the sufferer during his entire illness. Night and day Mrs. Harvey administered to Mr. Sellers' needs and her system has become so run down that at this time she is at her home on Tropico avenue in a serious condition. Under expert medical attention it is hoped that she will soon be able to be about.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

The Thursday Afternoon Club held an all-day session May 18 at the home of Mrs. A. O. Conrad, of Glendale avenue. A bountiful luncheon was served in the summer house at high noon. Mrs. Conrad was assisted by Mrs. Frank Ballantyne, Mrs. Hal Davenport, Mrs. W. S. Black and Mrs. Peters.

As it was the regular day set aside for work for the King's Daughters' day nursery, material was prepared for the ladies to work upon, and over a dozen useful articles were finished and sent to that institution.

The present board of directors of the King's Daughters day nursery, Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. Jarvis, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Paddock, were guests of the club, and each gave a very interesting account of some phase of the work done by the nursery. As these ladies have been associated with the institution since its beginning, fifteen years ago, their remarks were heard with much interest.

There will be a picnic held at Verdugo Park May 30 for the members of the club, their husbands and friends.

The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. E. W. Richardson, June 1. Owing to the unavoidable absence of Mrs. F. B. Long, who was to have addressed the club, the delegates from the State Federation at Long Beach will report on that day.

WEST GLENDALE

Mr. and Mrs. Shirland Hitchcock have returned home after a ten days' absence in San Diego.

Mrs. Gordon of Los Angeles was in Glendale the first of the week as a guest of Mrs. Ed Clay.

Mrs. E. C. Copeland has returned to her home, 1618 West Sixth street, after a short stay at Lankershim.

Mrs. Lena Bridges of Long Beach was the guest of Mrs. Laura Scamman, 1229 Milford street, last week.

Mrs. A. H. Schafer and children of Pasadena were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Patch of Ivy street, a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Parker who have been visiting at Adams Springs for a few weeks, returned to their Glendale home Saturday evening. They report a very enjoyable vacation, but owing to the rainy weather during the latter part of their stay, they concluded that Glendale was all right. Mr. Parker returned to his position as correction clerk, with the Southern Pacific in Los Angeles. Later on they expect to spend some time at Venice and Ocean Park.

In last week's issue we stated the latest arrival in West Glendale as being a little miss on Burchett street but we will have to take it all back, for the newest arrival happens to be Master Sanford Van Louven of West Sixth street. Master Sanford arrived in Glendale on Saturday, May 20, and of course being the first in the family he is just about the finest boy in the country, and expects to be in time to come assistant superintendent of the West Glendale M. E. church, of which his parents are prominent members.

Miss Kathleen Dodge entertained the graduating class of the West Glendale school at her home, 1435 W. Fourth street, on Friday evening last. The entire class, numbering about 25, were present with Mansfield Tweedy, Esther Shremp and Alpha Pringle as invited guests. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion with flowers and ferns, while the class colors, prrple and white, were in evidence throughout the different rooms. The young people made merry with games and music until a late hour, when they all repaired to the spacious dining room and did justice to the dainty refreshments that were prepared for them by the young hostess and her mother, Mrs. L. G. Dodge. Prizes were awarded to Chester Kilgore, Cleo Hartley and Janet Dewar, as winners of the various games played during the evening. The entire class voted Miss Kathleen a most charming hostess and the evening's entertainment one to be remembered.

SCHOOL NOTES.

School closes Friday, June 2nd Commencement exercises will be held in the school building on Wednesday afternoon. The last meeting of the P. T. A. for this year will be held on Thursday next; everyone welcome The pupils of the school will take part in the memorial exercises to be held at Grand View cemetery on May 30th. Hereafter this holiday will not be observed, the various schools having received notices to that effect The boys of the school are going to practice all vacation to see if they can't win just one lone game of ball from the Tropico team next year.

CASA VERDUGO

Kelley and Firsich have sold for Mr. Peterson a lot and residence adjoining the property of Mrs. Hawken on Valley View road, for $3500.

Mrs. Firsich recently sold the property, consisting of ten acres on the corner of Stocker and Sixth street belonging to Mr. Schroeder, to Mr. Tucker, for $18,000.

The Hatfield Hardware Company opens a store in the new block just completed on Central avenue north of the wash, the coming week. An addition is promised to the north side of this building, work to commence very soon, the room to be occupied as a place for light refreshments and confectionery.

Mrs. N. C. Kelley entertained at the Pepper Tree Inn last Wednesday a large party of her lady friends, members of the Spinnet Club of Los Angeles. After luncheon at the hotel the party adjourned to the residence of Mrs. Kelly near by and the afternoon was devoetd to the discussion of Wagner with a number of selections from his work.

The old subject, the widening of Kenneth road, is again being agitated It is to be hoped that the property owners can get together on some plan for bringing about this much-to-be-desired consummation, for this is the finest scenic road in the valley and should be made as attractive as it is possible to do.

Six lots on the east side of Louise street below Randolph, belonging to Mr. Edwin Pierce, have been sold through the agency of the Daniel Hanlon Realty Co. of Los Angeles to Mr. E. J. Marshall, the price paid being $1000 a lot. Mr. Marshall is a builder now in the East and it is understood that he will build upon the property he has acquired.

The work on the Burbank extension of the P. E. track began this week. The line starts in just south of the wash a hundred feet north of Arden avenue. It crosses the wash diagonally running northward of the laundry in a straight line westward. It is understood that certain property owners in the vicinity of the work have applied for an injunction to restrain the company from constructing the road as begun, above grade.
